India is one of the world's great nations and most important emerging markets. A robust democracy of 1.2 billion citizens, it has high education levels, globally competitive industries, rising demand for consumer products of all kinds, and big ambitions. It is also — as the recent trade mission led by Prime Minister David Cameron underlined — one of Britain's most attractive partners for trade, investment and educational and cultural exchange.

The Spectator's India Summit will look at direct investment prospects for Indian companies in the UK, and for UK companies in India; and at how financial investors can buy into the Indian success story.

This is an opportunity for entrepreneurs, professionals and investors to learn more about India's extraordinary potential to become a major economic power of the 21st century,
